City Council votes to aid Mt. Miguel and Old Time Days

The Lemon Grove City Council loosened its purse strings Monday night, agreeing to give the Mount Miguel Marching Band $2,000 and the Lemon Grove Old Time Days Association $8,000.

The Mount Miguel Marching Band has been invited to participate in the Tournament of Roses Parade, the only school in San Diego County to receive an invitation, which has not been extended to Mount Miguel since 1962. Mount Miguel Band supporter, Al Gloyer, addressed the Council saying that the marching band did its best to raise money for the band's expenses throughout the year with numerous fund raisers, but the invitation to the Rose Parade was unexpected and there is no money in the band's budget to cover the nearly $20,000 it will cost for the band to participate. Approximately half of the students who attend Mount Miguel are from Lemon Grove and, Gloyer pointed out, the band has never asked the City of Lemon Grove for assistance before.

Mt. Miguel Band member, Brian Krumpaker, spoke for the large contingent of students in the audience saying, "It's been a lifelong dream to go to the Rose Parade."

Going against staff recommendation to deny the request for funding, Mayor Jim Dorman said, "I think this is the type of thing we should be proud of and support. I think we should somehow squeeze out a few bucks from our budget for these kids." The rest of the Council unanimously agreed with Dorman.

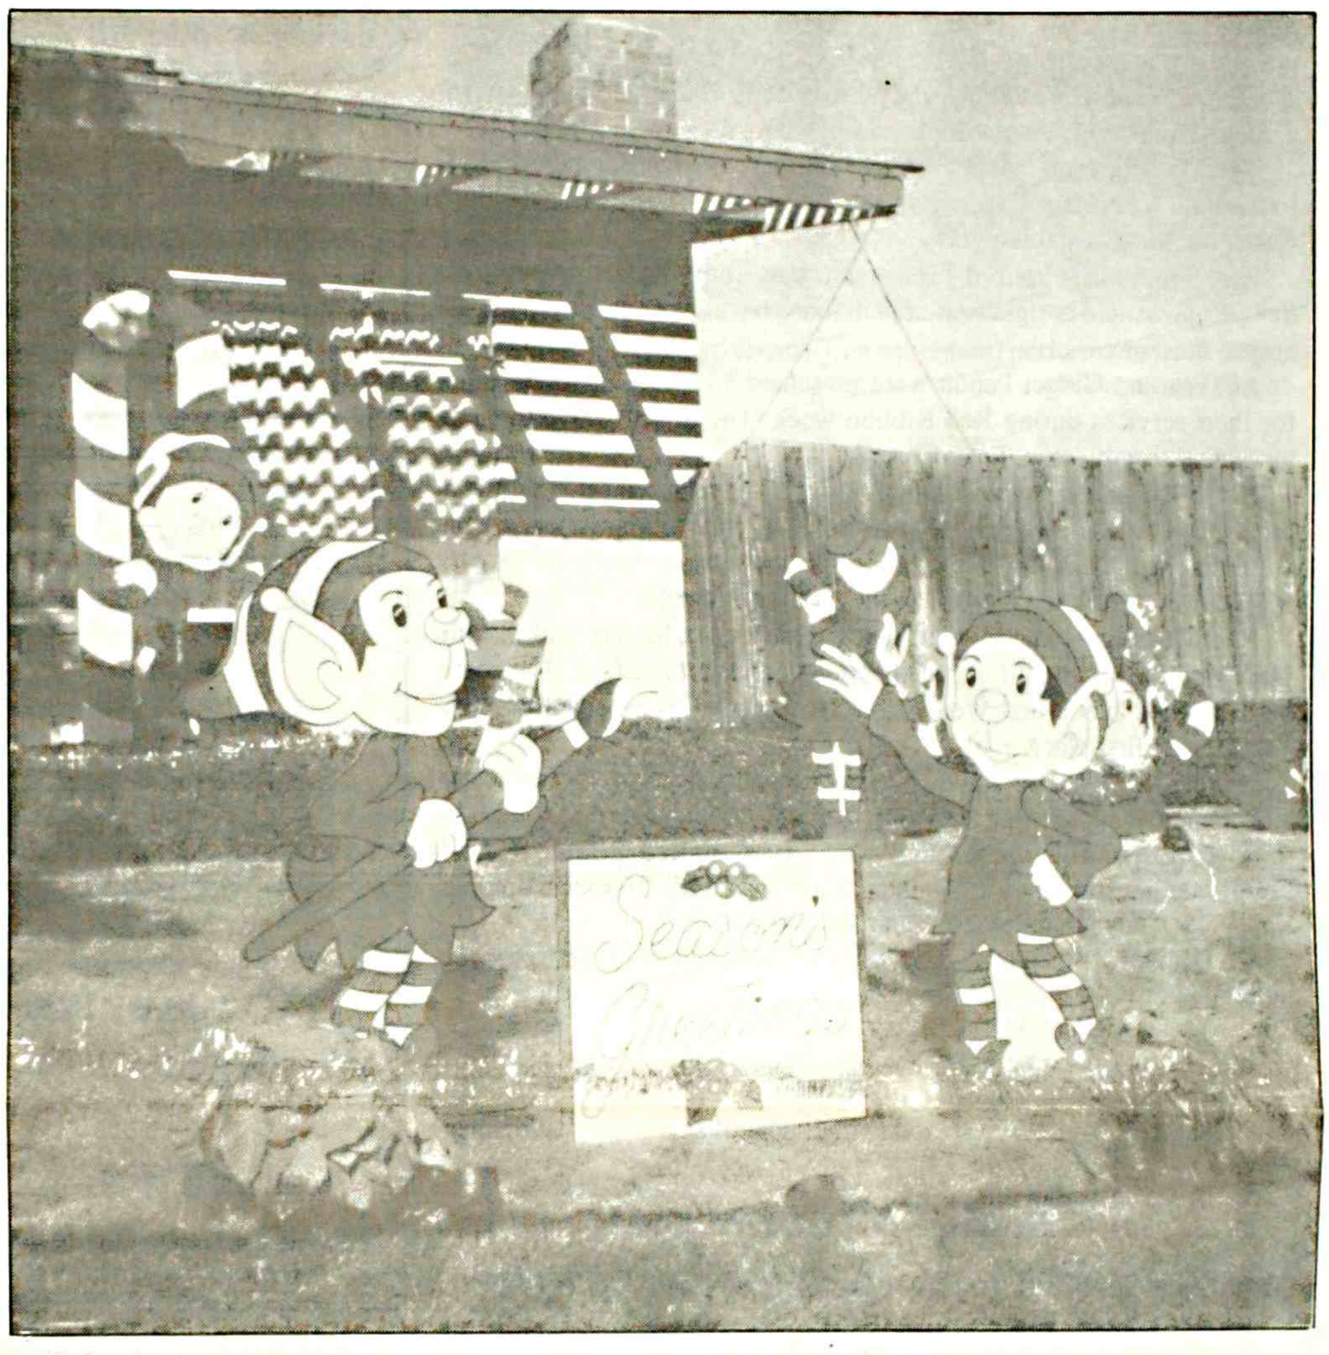
The Council also considered a request from the Lemon Grove Old Time Days Association for increased funding. The City had allocated $6,000 to the Old Time Days Association in its budget, but the Association's Co-chairman John Pipes said they would need $10,000 this year because they are hoping to lure more bands into the parade. "We've pledged to give the out of town bands $250 to help defray the cost of participating in the parade and we're trying to get the Navy band to come out here and play, which means we have to transport them and feed them," said Pipes. The cost of fireworks, trophies and insurance has gone up as well, he added.

Mayor Dorman suggested the Association try to solicit money from Lemon Grove businesses to help with the community event. Councilman Robert Burns proposed that the Council meet the Association half way at $8,000 and the rest of the Council agreed.

The City also passed a resolution declaring its intention to establish an underground utility district to convert the overhead utilities to underground on Broadway from Massachusetts Avenue to North Avenue, on Federal Boulevard from Broadway to College Avenue, on Broadway from Kempf Street east to the Broadway Square Shopping Center and from Washington Street to Sweetwater Way. Underground utilities will also be on Lester Avenue from Lemon Grove Avenue to Grove Street, on Golden Avenue from Lemon Grove Avenue to Kempf Street, on School Lane from Golden Avenue to Lincoln Street and on Grove Street from Broadway to Lemon Grove Way.The cost of the conversion has been estimated by San Diego Gas & Electric to be $2,608,500 and the conversion construction will occur during calender years 1991 and 1992. The City currently has $2,005,998 accumulated in its underground conversion fund and should have an additional $700,000 available during the next two calender years.The underground conversion will create additional unknown costs to property owners because they will be financially responsible for converting their utilities on their property from the meter to the street. The Council set January 7, 1990 as the date for a public hearing to consider the formation of of the underground district and every property owner within the district will have an opportunity to express their opinion.

Acting as the Redevelopment Agency, the Council approved an agreement with Continental Pacific Development Company, doing business as Gateway limited. concerning the project to be located at the northeast corner of College Avenue and Federal Boulevard.

The agreement is that Gateway limited will acquire the Yum Yum Donut property and relocate the donut shop in their proposed development. In exchange, the Redevelopment Agency will provide $300,000 in the form of a loan to Gateway Limited so they can acquire the Yum Yum Donut property. The developer agrees to repay the loan with interest at the time the project is sold or in five years, whichever comes first.



Christmas elves frolic on the lawn of Tom and Nancy Kovar's house on Angelus

Holiday spirit hits Lemon Grove

By Lisa Parsons

Despite the sunny weather and un-Christmas-like temperatures, one neighborhood in Lemon Grove has gotten into the Christmas spirit.

Several residents on Angelus at the corner of Canton Drive have gone all-out this holiday season to create a Christmas display in their neighborhood.

Donna Clabby, who has lived in her house on Angelus for more than 30 years, said the Christmas decorations have become a neighborhood project. "In years past, we all used to decorate," said Clabby, "but there was no neighborhood effort."

This is the second year the neighbors have worked together to transform their neighborhood, and Clabby admitted that it was a lot of work this year, "We all kept saying, 'All I want for Christmas is a new set of lights,'" she said with a laugh.

Clabby's next door neighbor, Nancy Kovar, made most of the characters for her neighbor's lawns, ranging from frolicking Christmas elves and candy canes to the familiar cartoon characters, Garfield and Odie.

"The theme around here is sort of 'Love thy neighbor,'" said Clabby, pointing out those words inscribed in her driveway and on the sidewalk between the houses. "We really got to know each other when we made the Christmas decorations a neighborhood effort and now there's a real sense of community."

Santa Claus and one of his elves will visit Angelus street and hand out candy canes on December 21st. The Christmas lights are lit every night from 5:30 to 9:30 and sightseers are welcome.

Wayne Buttron's annual North Pole creation at 2626 Sheri Lane is currently under construction also. He plans to have the lights flashing and Santa and Mrs. Claus in their home by December 8th. Don't miss these beautiful Christmas displays!

Multi-cultural mural unveiled

A ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held in the Grossmont College Library computer lab on December 10 from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. to unveil a new multicultural mural that has been designed by instructor, curator and muralist Victor Ochoa and 15 of his Cross-Cultural Studies students. Ethnic entertainment and refreshments will be provide, and college officials will be on hand to honor Mr. Ochoa and his students.

Mr. Ochoa initiated the Chicano Park that is beneath the Coronado Bay Bridge, and restored the existing mural on the telecommunications building at Grossmont College.

Beverly Blaylock, manager of instructional computing systems at Grossmont College, wanted to humanize the cold and mechanical environment that often surrounds large computer labs.

A committee was formed, headed by Leilani Clark, a sociology instructor, and Kathleen Coret, Blaylock's student assistant, and involved every cultural group on campus.

The resulting mural and appropriate displays will be a project providing more exposure to ethnic expression.

The public is invited to this event. For more information, call 465-1700 extension 390.

Joe Freed's holiday movie previews

To most people, Christmas means candy canes and Santa Claus. For me, it means movies, movies, movies.

Eager to cash in on cold weather, school vacations and the Academy Awards, studios have traditionally flooded theaters with new films at Christmas time. This year, they've really outdone themselves. Here's a little peek at some of the more intriguing films headed to a theater near you.

"Alice"

This one has me excited! The newest from writer/director/film-stud Woody Allen, "Alice," in the words of Allen himself, "...is a contemporary comedy about a wife who goes through a remarkable series of experiences at a critical point in her life." I'll say. The film is about a woman (Mia Farrow) who turns invisible, and then finds out what her friends and lovers are really like. A fantastic supporting cast includes William Hurt, Alec Baldwin, Blythe Danner, Joe Mantegna, and Cybil Shepherd. Opens the week of December 23.

"Awakenings"

Based on the true-life story of a patient who comes out of a 30-year coma, director Penny Marshall's first dramatic attempt stars Robert De Niro and Robin Williams. More interesting than the plot line is a behind-the-scenes story about the movie's two stars. The gossip columns say Williams became angered during filming and punched De Niro, breaking his nose. The "official" story from Marshall claims that the face-rearranging was an accident during filming. "Awakenings" opens around Christmas.

"Bonfire of the Vanities"

Tom Hanks, Melanie Griffith, Bruce Willis and Morgan Freeman star in a tale about a Park Avenue bond salesman who sparks racial tension. Directed by Brian De Palma and adapted from Tom Wolfe's best-selling novel, the filming itself led to protests in the Bronx. Opens December 21.

"The Godfather Part III"

Aged Michael Corleone (Al Pacino) struggles to maintain the family fortune while going legitimate. Along the way, he mends his failed marriage and has to deal with an ambitious nephew (Andy Garcia) who wants control of the "family." The first two "Godfathers" both won best picture Academy Awards, so if director Francis Ford Coppola has kept up the good work.... Opens Christmas Day.

"The Russia House"

A British publisher is sent to Moscow to discover the truth about smuggled nuclear physics information. He ends up falling for a beautiful Russian book editor (Michelle Pfeiffer) who supplies him with secret documents. Also in the cast are Klaus Maria Brandauer and one of my all-time favorites, Roy Scheider. Arrives in theaters in late December.

"Scenes From A Mall"

Oh, what a blessed season! Not one, but two films with Woody Allen. Yes, I know he doesn't appear as an actor in "Alice," but he makes up for it by starring in this comedy, written and directed by Paul Mazursky. It's all about Nick (Allen) and Deborah (Bette Midler), a married couple who celebrate their fifteenth wedding anniversary by shopping for gifts for each other. I really don't know when it opens, but it's soon! So keep your eyes open.

"The Sheltering Sky"

From Academy Award winning director, Bernardo Bertolucci ("The Last Emperor"), this adaptation of the Paul Bowles novel stars John Malkovich and Debra Winger as married writers exploring North Africa in 1948. Bertolucci has reassembled much of his talented "Last Emperor" crew, and the film is rumored to be excellent. Set for release on December 14.

"Valkenvania"

I don't know about this. It might be good...maybe. Written and directed by Dan Aykroyd, it stars Chevy Chase, John Candy, Demi Moore and Aykroyd. Chase and Moore take a deadly detour and end up in the courtroom of a 100 year-old judge who executes innocent travellers just for kicks. The film reportedly gives Chase the ability to act as a macho man!

The Gringos' revenge

Every New Year's Eve down at our Mexican "hide-a-way," a tiny village south of San Felipe, our landlords, Rafael and his wife, Olga, put on a gala fiesta for all of the villagers. Olga is an excellent cook and would out-do herself on this particular occasion. There was always plenty of good Mexican food, Mexican cervesa, and dance music, provided by the mariachi.

One year, as soon as the new year was rung in, my wife, Willie Marie, and I headed back to our casa and supposedly a good night's sleep. We were both awakened about 3 a.m., to the loudest music, just like it was in the next room.

Willie hollered, "Do you have to have the radio on all night and why so darn loud?" But it was the mariachi left over from the party, in the back of a pick-up truck right at our doorstep, playing their drunken hearts out. I thought that it was real special and just for us.

Several New Year's Eve parties ago, the Americanos took over the food of the fiesta to show the Mexicans how a real western bar-b-que was done. It was a total disaster, and ended up with not only hangovers, but food poisioning for several of our friends.

It seems that a couple Mexicans and some Americanos drove into Matomi Valley, about 20 miles west of Puertocitos, where Rafael grazed some very boney cattle. Rafael said, "Pick out a fat one, shoot it, dress, and haul the carcass back here to roast."

The boys went back into the valley to find that fat steer. There wasn't any cow that was really fit to kill, as they were all so skinny from trying to exist on desert fare. After a few beers and tequilas they shot the closest one that stood still.

One of the happy Gauchos suggested, "While the steer is bleeding, we can have more refreshments," They drank a lot more, and all hands fell asleep.

After their too-long siesta, the now half-sober boys dragged the dead animal which had been laying out in the sun all that time, over to the truck and loaded it aboard. When they returned to the village, it was so late that they left the cow in the truck and went to their homes to get some more sleep.

About noon the following day, they proceeded to skin and dress the steer in preparation for the bar-b-que. The Americanos who remained at the cantina had chopped a big hole in the patio cement floor, and rigged up a spit that was rotated by an automobile starter motor with power from a car battery.

The fire was reduced to glowing red coals, ready for the huge roast. The dressed steer was hoisted up on the spit and the long vigil began. The Americanos tended the fire and basted the animal for one night and all the next day, until New Year's Eve.

Ole! It was "fiesta time." The whole village had watched the roasting for so long and now it was pronounced ready. It did look good.

As soon as the beast was dropped on a table and the first cut made, a terrible odor arose from its insides. Everyone turned and walked away from the serving table. Only a few Mexicans braved the smell to go up close and get some of the meat. I saw one tequila-soaked hombre take a big bite and spit it on the ground. The meat had "aged" in the sun just a little too long before the roasting began.

The gala New Year's party was a stinking flop. Willie said, "Just leave it to the 'big shot' Americans to goof things up. And don't forget to dot the 'i'."

ECPAC presents 'Sing Along Messiah' December 14th

In addition the "The Messiah," a special performance of Bach's "Magnificat" will begin the evening's program.

Grossmont Hospital holds toy and food drive to help community's needy

The La Mesa Optimists Club and employees of Grossmont Hospital are asking members of the community to join together to make the 1990 holiday season a little brighter for East County's needy families. The two groups are sponsoring the 10th annual "Santa's Korner," an effort to collect toys for youngsters and gifts for the elderly.

"Santa's Korner" will occupy part of Grossmont Hospital's lobby at 5555 Grossmont Center Drive in La Mesa, from November 26 to December 13. Hospital employees and area residents can stop by to drop off items such as new or used toys (in good condition), baby formula, diapers, and products for needy seniors like personal toiletries, clothes and household items which will be distributed to selected needy families in the area. Money also will accepted, and it will be used to buy gifts, toys and food for the families. Gifts of money should be brought to the Material Management department, located on level B in the main hospital.

Tips on holiday gift buying offered by local physician

Tearing through brightly-colored wrapping to get at a brand-new toy is part of most children's holidays.

And watching a child play with his new gift is a joy for parents to behold. But if the toy turns out to be unsafe or inappropriate for the child's age, the joy could quickly turn to tragedy

"When adults choose a toy for a child, they should always do so with safety in mind," said Melinda Stern, M.D, a pediatrician affiliated with Extracare Medical Group at the Jamacha Medical Center.

"A child usually won't recognize a potential hazard in a toy, so it's up to the parent to inspect and choose each toy with the utmost care."

Dr. Stern offers the following guidelines to help insure that holidays are both happy and safe:

• Throw away all plastic wrappings immediately. If a child covers his nose or mouth with it, it can restrict his breathing.

• Look for safety labels such as "non-toxic," on painted toys. Stuffed toys and dolls should be made of washable materials.

• Recommended age-labeling should be used as a guide. It's important to keep in mind the abilities of the particular child, "A toy that is meant for a older child may be challenging for a younger child, but it may also be dangerous," said Dr. Stern.

• Toys purchased for babies should be too large to fit into the mouth. They should be soft, washable, and should have no small parts that the baby could easily pull off and swallow or put into his nose or ear.

• All toys should be free of sharp edges.

• All electrical toys and games should be approved by the Underwriter's Laboratory," said Dr. Stern. "Their insignia, (UL), should appear on the cord and on the toy itself," Any toy that must be plugged into a socket should not be given to children under school-age under any circumstances. Children who are old enough to play with electrical toys should always be supervised by a adult.

• Any toys that make extremely loud noises should be avoided because they may cause damage to a child's hearing.

• Bicycles have always been a favorite holiday gift. "A bicycle helmet should always be a part of the gift," said Dr. Stern. "And parents should be certain their child understands that whenever he or she mounts the bike, the helmet should be on their head."

• When considering a toy that requires supervision, parents should also consider if they will always be willing to provide it.

Toys are a part of the magic of the holidays for children and adults alike. By using these guidlines, parents can rest assured the toys they've chosen for their children will provide hours of joy without risk of injury.

Monterey Heights November good citizens honored

Monterey Heights announced its outstanding and most improved citizens at its November Good Citizens Assembly.

Parents were on hand to award certificates and bumper stickers to the good citizens and enjoy a special reception in the cafeteria afterwards.

"It's a real honor for the children to be recognized in front of the whole school," said Principal Glen Heath. "We used to give the awards at PTA meetings, but this is more effective because the entire student body sees the reward in being a good citizen."

Those honored were: Reva Carns, Dustin Gilbert, Andre Lewis, Amanda Beasley, Kimberly Ellis, Dee Partain, Ryan Soto,Deanna Winfield, Matt Clingan, JR Mayo, Michele Lowry, Michael Brooks, Francisco Casas, Rachel Gaeta, Jason Royce, Lacy Elliot, Paul Escobar, Sarah Hines, Tony Rayos, Samantha Boster, Lonnie Derum, Carlos Flores, Kalpana Somanathan, Jaime Serrano, Max Gabaldon, Sarah Gamet, Liliana Mercado, Robert Adams, Jackie Lloyd, Nick Johns, Jason Borgner, Kristal Hall, Patricia Maloney, Gabriel Campuzano, Jennifer Rayos, Jon Breyfogle and Glenn Bass.

Red Cross gives holiday safety ideas

December is a month with a festive atmosphere, last-minute shopping sprees and plunging temperatures. Many individuals decorate trees or have other decorations around their home or office that will remain untouched for weeks, providing a festive ambience and unfortunately, a threat for fires and accidents.

During the holiday season, home fires are more prevalent and the American Red Cross recommends following these holiday safety tips to prevent joyful holidays from becoming tragedies.

When decorating:

• If you need to reach high objects or tall trees, always use a ladder, never a chair. Avoid leaning and reaching too far on a ladder, by continually repositioning the ladder.

• Never use candles on or near trees or other decorations.

• Use only fire-proof trees and decorations.

• Make a fresh cut on trees and keep tree trunks immersed in water.

• Place trees and other decorations away from radiators, fireplaces and heaters.

• Make sure trees are secure in stands. If necessary, use wire to secure trees to the wall.

• Do not smoke within five feet of trees.

•Do not attach too many light strings to one outlet.

•Use light sets that are approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories (UL).

•Do not use electric lights on metallic trees. Indirect lighting by spotlights is recommended.

•Keep decorations and ornaments out of a young child's reach. Some decorations may be dangerous to small children.

•Instruct your children not to tug on the trees or ornaments.

•Keep pets away from trees and decorations.

•Take trees down when they become dry. Take trees to a recycling center or put them out with the trash.

Do not burn trees in fireplaces; heat may explode the wood and set fire to the room.

• Never leave the tree lights on when trees are unattended.

When cooking:

• Turn off the burners on your stove and your oven, and pull the plugs on appliances when you are finished using them.

• Turn pot handles inwards on the stove and use back burners whenever possible to prevent children from pulling the pans and contents off.

• Put hot foods in the center of the table. Keep them away from the edges, where a bump of an arm or a curious child may cause an accident.

• During meal preparation keep children out of the kitchen.

• Use placemats at your dinner table instead of table cloths; children may pull these and cause an accident.

• Make sure smoke alarms and their batteries are in proper working condition.
